DESCRIPTION

| |
|---|
| Attached to a field wall c 100m south west of the main Highfield buildings is a small structure c.6m by 4m externally, with simply capped gable ends, a broad opening in the centre of its south wall and a small window in each gable end. It formerly had a small walled yard attached on the south; the stones from the coping of its wall, of triangular section now lie on the north of the farmhouse. In the field in front of this are various earthwork features, some are said to relate to former sheep folds, but one contains what looks like iron slag and may relate to a former bloomery [A0218] Peter Ryder, Farm Survey 2006. |
